Appomattox Senior FFA Best Overall

The Appomattox Senior FFA chapter has been judged area winner of the 1979 FFA Chapter Contest. In selecting the area winner, the committee considered the accomplishments of thirty-three local chapters in the fourteen-county area.

The Appomattox chapter has 251 active members. In cooperation with the Appomattox Junior FFA chapter, an outstanding Building Our American Communities program was carried out. The chapter worked with eleven school and community organizations in BOAC and safety activities.

The chapter raised nearly $20,000 through fund-raising activities to finance its program. Members participated in a community service project to help needy families at Christmastime.

The chapter cooperated with other agencies in fire prevention, production of food for wildlife and reforestation. Members exhibited nearly 400 items in local, regional, and state fairs.

AIR CONDITIONERS

Question: During hot weather, should I start my air conditioner early or when it begins to get really hot?

Answer: According to home economists from Whirlpool Corporation, you should start your unit in the morning hours during hot weather. Air conditioners have to work harder and operate less efficiently when started during the warmest part of the day.

The minimum adult requirement of water is about a quart of liquid per day.

Churches Encouraged To Proclaim "The Year of the Child"

By Dr. William L. Trimyer

Churches in Appomattox County are encouraged to give special recognition to children on Sunday, June 10, 1979. This year has been acclaimed as the INTERNATIONAL YEAR OF THE CHILD by the General Assembly of the United Nations. Schools, businesses, churches, and other institutions will be "spotlighting" children throughout the year 1979.

Churches are involved in numerous ways to give special recognition to the children within their congregations and communities.

A worship observance around the theme "The Year of the Child" can be held on the designated Sunday, June 10. Churches may substitute a more convenient Sunday other than the designated one, but each church is encouraged to give special emphasis to children on the designated Sunday.

Churches are encouraged to enlist children to participate in the Sunday morning worship. During that time the children could be given a gift from the church in the form of a book or Bible.

The minister may wish to preach on the importance of children. A suggested sermon topic is "Bless All the Dear Children." A good Bible reference for such a sermon is Mark 10:13-16.

Churches are encouraged to include some special activities for children during the summer months. A community carnival sponsored by several churches would greatly add to children's needs for fun. Retreats and day trips to some of Virginia's interesting sights would add to a child's need to expand his or her world.

Virginia Pork Festival

Over 12,000 tickets have been sold for the fifth annual Virginia Pork Festival to be held Wednesday, June 13, at The Greenville County Ruritan Club Grounds near Emporia, Virginia. Those attending will have an opportunity to sample at least twenty different pork food items and side dishes. All total, over seventeen tons of food will be served.

Continuous live music from the bandstands will lend to a carnival atmosphere. Country hams or pork related gift items will be given at drawings held throughout the festival. These drawings will be handled slightly differently for the '79 festival in that the individual must register on the grounds giving name and full address. If not present at the time of the drawing the gift will be mailed to the winner.

The festival is an unique activity in the Southeastern United States. It is made possible through the cooperative efforts of thirty different area civic and educational organizations.

Time of Electricity Use Affects Electricity Costs

As summer temperatures rise, use of electricity soars dramatically because of air conditioning, refrigeration and ventilation. Electric bills are naturally higher because of increased summer use, but heavy use during certain hours of the day causes future escalation of electric bills that customers are generally unaware of, according to D.C. Stables, Jr., Vepco's Farmville District Manager.

A day at one of Virginia's nature parks or a fun trip to one of our local amusement centers would mean a great deal to children.

Churches may also wish to incorporate in their planning and schedule a special emphasis on family living. A "Family Life Conference" in the fall could focus on the need for families to spend more time together and doing things which foster better family relationships.

The entire week of June 10-17 could be given over to a special emphasis on family life. Families can be encouraged to schedule outings and activities which would involve parents and children together. Such a week could evolve into a special "Family Recognition Day" on Father's Day, June 17.

Churches might also consider holding a Child Craft Fair, encouraging children in the church to display their art, handcrafts, hobbies, and other special interests.

The pastor or priest may want to consider conducting a brief worship service for children during the regular worship hour each Sunday. A Pastor's Pals Club can be organized so that a pastor and the children of the church may come to know one another on a more personal basis.

The important thing is that children everywhere be recognized and appreciated for the beauty they add to all of life.

IYC COMMITTEE

Electricity can not be stored - it must be generated at the instant it is needed. As a power company's load climbs during a hot day, additional generators must be operated to carry the load. The power company naturally uses its lowest cost generation - hydro, nuclear and coal - to carry as much load as possible. As its load climbs, the power company must run higher cost generators - oil fired steam units and oil fired combustion turbines.Yet there are hours between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m. when even the lowest cost generators are not loaded to capacity.

Stables noted that the difference in generating costs to the power company between peak use periods and low use periods is much greater than most people might guess. For example, to fully heat the water in a 50 gallon water heater during a hot summer afternoon might require the power company to use $1.00 worth of fuel. To do the same heating after midnight might require less than 30c worth of fuel. The power company's fuel costs will generally be passed on to its customers within several months in some type of fuel cost adjustment; therefore, its customers can benefit by scheduling as much electricity use as possible during low use periods rather than peak use periods.

In explaining how this might be done by a typical family, Stables again referred to the water heater which uses a relatively large amount of electricity. When a sizeable quantity of hot water is drawn, the water heater will operate for several hours to restore a reservoir of hot water. If laundrying, dish washing and bathing are done just before bedtime, the water heater will be recharging after midnight. On the hand, when these activities are done from mid-morning to early afternoon, the water heater will be recharging when the power company's load is highest. Likewise, heavy cooking, clothes drying and other activities requiring heavy use should be scheduled before 10 a.m. and after 10 p.m.

Even air conditioning can be scheduled in a way to cut peak-hour use. If air conditioning is not turned on until a building becomes unbearably hot, it will probably run constantly during peak hours; but if it is left on or turned on early in the day, it will cycle on and off through peak hours, in effect spreading some of the load to off peak hours.

Stables said that Vepco and other electric utilities are gradually phasing in time-of-use meters and rates so that charges for on-peak and off-peak use will differ to reflect the utility's costs of generation. He noted that the utilities are being encouraged to go to time-of-use by national and state regulatory agencies to reduce the use of petroleum as well as reduce the need for new generating plants.

RAISING CANE

Most of us think of America as the most industrialized nation in the world, yet we are also one of the greatest and most efficient agricultural nations in the world.

Interestingly, our own farms meet most of our needs even for two of our three largest food imports, sugar and meat. The third is coffee which we don't grow.

However, our own sugar industry, which contributes $10.5 billion to the nation's economy and employs over 100,000 people, is being threatened by the dumping of foreign surplus sugar on our markets.

Many concerned legislators are urging Congress to adopt a Sugar Regulation Act which would protect our sugar industry and keep us from becoming dependent on foreign suppliers. They are very aware of our continuing and bitter experience with OPEC oil countries.
